

Remote Work Policy

Company: [Company Name] | Effective Date: [Insert Date] | Policy Owner: Human Resources / Finance

Purpose: This sample policy is designed for internal company use and should be reviewed and adapted to local laws, tax rules, employment requirements, and company-specific practices before adoption.

1. Purpose and Eligibility

This policy describes expectations for employees who work remotely on a full-time, hybrid, or occasional basis. Remote work is a work arrangement, not a change in performance expectations or employment responsibilities.

Eligibility depends on role requirements, performance, team needs, security considerations, location, and manager approval. Some positions must remain on-site because of customer, equipment, laboratory, manufacturing, security, or collaboration requirements.

2. Approved Work Location

Employees must work from an approved location and keep HR informed of their primary work address when required. Working from another state, province, or country may create tax, payroll, immigration, labor law, data protection, or insurance obligations and requires written approval in advance.

- Short-term work from another location may also require approval.
- Employees are responsible for maintaining a safe, professional, and reasonably private workspace.

3. Work Hours and Availability

Remote employees must follow their assigned schedule and be available during agreed working hours, subject to local wage-and-hour rules. Teams may establish core collaboration hours for meetings and real-time work.

- Employees should maintain accurate time records where required.
- Overtime or additional hours must be approved in accordance with company policy and law.
- Remote work is not a substitute for dependent care during working time when care demands would prevent the employee from performing job responsibilities.

4. Communication and Performance

Employees are expected to meet the same performance, conduct, quality, responsiveness, and collaboration standards that apply to on-site work. Managers should set clear goals, communication channels, meeting expectations, and deliverables.

- Attend required meetings with working audio/video capability when needed for the role.
- Keep calendars and work status reasonably current.
- Escalate blockers, outages, security incidents, or accessibility issues promptly.

5. Equipment and Expenses

The company may provide or approve equipment such as laptops, monitors, headsets, security keys, or other tools. Company property must be used responsibly, protected from loss or damage, and returned when requested or at the end of employment.

Reimbursement of home internet, phone, furniture, utilities, or office supplies is governed by company programs and applicable law. Employees should obtain approval before purchasing equipment they expect the company to reimburse.

6. Information Security and Confidentiality

All information security, privacy, records, confidentiality, and acceptable-use rules apply equally to remote work.

- Use company-approved devices, accounts, VPN, multi-factor authentication, and cloud services.
- Do not allow household members or other unauthorized persons to use company devices or access company information.
- Avoid discussing confidential matters where conversations can be overheard.
- Secure paper records and dispose of sensitive material using approved methods.

7. Health, Safety, and Ergonomics

Employees should maintain a safe workspace free of obvious hazards and use reasonable ergonomic practices. Work-related injuries or safety incidents must be reported promptly under the company's incident-reporting process.

8. On-Site Attendance and Travel

Remote employees may be required to attend company offices, customer sites, training, team events, or other business meetings. The company will communicate attendance expectations and travel reimbursement rules in advance where practical.

9. Changes or Termination of Remote Arrangement

Remote work arrangements may be modified or ended based on business needs, performance, security, legal requirements, location changes, or policy violations, subject to applicable law and any written employment agreement.

Policy Administration: Questions about this policy should be directed to the policy owner. [Company Name] may revise this policy at any time, subject to applicable law and required notice.
